Fund helps send children to camp

Haliburton Highlands: cottage country and home to the natural beauty of lakes and forests. Haliburton Highlands: home to many amazing camps for children and teens. Haliburton Highlands: one of the poorest counties in Ontario. So many of our children and teens would benefit from all that the camp experience has to offer but so many of our families cannot afford to send their children to camp. The average cost to send a child/youth to camp is $800 per week for residential camp and $225 per week for day camp.

Since 1987, the Haliburton County Summer Camp Fund has helped children and youth build self-esteem, friendships, skills and memories at summer camp that will last a lifetime. Our goal is to raise $9,000 so we can send as many children with physical, developmental, social or behavioural challenges to camp. All children sponsored through your donations are Haliburton County residents who attend local schools and who will attend local camps.

Please make camp a reality for our kids who need it most. With your tax deductible donation to the Haliburton County Summer Camp Fund (sponsored by Point in Time Centre for Children, Youth and Parents), you can help send a child to camp this summer. Please make your cheque payable to Haliburton County Summer Camp Fund and mail to Point in Time Centre for Children, Youth and Parents, 69 Eastern Ave., Haliburton ON. For more information please call Dawn Hurd at Point in Time. 705-457-5345 Ext.311

Shoreline naturalization workshop and planting event June 11

The Coalition of Haliburton Property Owners Association is seeking interested lakefront land-owners and volunteers to participate in a Shoreline Naturalization Workshop and planting event this June!

In 2016 the Coalition of Haliburton Property Owners Association, in partnership with the Municipality of Dysart et al and Glenside Ecological Services, is creating a shoreline renaturalization demonstration site in Sam Slick Park on Head Lake in the town of Haliburton.

Stage 1 of the planting on this site will take place 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. June 11, 2016 and is an opportunity through Glenside Ecological to learn about restoration planning components such as: erosion control, vegetation spacing, invasive species, access points and buffer zones. for high school students to earn some volunteer hours. Shovels and gloves will be provided, however, bringing your own shovel would be appreciated. Snacks and refreshments will be provided once the planting has been completed.

For more information or if you would like to sign up or volunteer, please contact Jim McHardy at: jjmchardy@sympatico.ca 705-205-2310

Senior's Spotlight

Cooking a lifelong pursuit for Lesperance

By Chad Ingram

Marilynne Lesperance has been preparing meals since she was a child.

The Minden Hills resident is chairwoman of the Minden Food Bank and donates much of her time to the Minden Community Food Centre on Newcastle Street.

Born and raised in Windsor, Ont., Lesperance's mother, a maître d' at a dinner club, was murdered when Lesperance was just nine.

Her father turning to the bottle, it was up to Lesperance to raise her younger brother and sister.

"I learned how to cook the hard way," says Lesperance, 70, seated in her office at the food centre.

She cooked at Windsor's Killarney Castle restaurant while putting herself through business college, then worked as an expeditor for an appliance company.

Lesperance and her husband, Danny Pitcher, left Windsor in 1967, "because my husband couldn't get a job there because he was too little," Lesperance says, explaining the "big three" automotive manufacturers at the time had weight minimums for workers that Pitcher didn't meet.

The couple moved to Toronto.

"When my children were born, I drove a school bus," Lesperance says. "Then the union came. The CAW came to organize."

Lesperance not only drove a bus, but became the president of her union local and was eventually hired as national representative in 1984, something unheard of for a woman at the time.

She held that position for 27 years and, notes with some pride, had only two strikes during that time.

"I believe in negotiating," she says.

Lesperance also took labour relations courses at the University of Toronto and would eventually go on to lecture there, organizing mock negotiations between students and labour leaders.

"In the meantime, I was cooking all the time," she says.

Twelve years ago, she retired and moved from Pickering to Haliburton County.

"I always wanted to retire on the water," Lesperance says. "I had a friends who lived up here."

She says she loved the area and also the fact it was only an hour-and-a-half drive from her two sons and six grandchildren.

Lesperance first got involved with Foods for Kids, volunteering with the snack and breakfast program.

"Joanna Penfold and Sheila Redpath wanted to start a community kitchen," Lesperance says, explaining a group of volunteers working out of the Minden Hills Community Centre then began making meals for the food bank through a program with SIRCH Community Services.

Eventually the group began preparing meals directly for the food bank itself. With the opening of the food centre last year – a collaboration between the local Masons and the food bank –they now have their own kitchen space in which to do the cooking.

"Up until then, we had been dragging equipment back and forth from my garage to the arena," Lesperance says.

Along with housing the food bank, the centre also offers a variety of food-oriented programming, including cooking classes for children.

"I find the cooking with the kids and the teaching is hugely satisfying," Lesperance says. "It's very gratifying. When you're negotiating for people, you're giving back . . . to the workers, to the companies and to the community."

She adds the CAW is a very socially conscious union.

"I think my whole life was based on giving back," she says. "For me, this is a transition and the next step will be succession planning . . . that somebody takes over."

Along with her volunteerism with the food bank, Lesperance is chairwoman of the board for Fuel for Warmth, sits on the Minden Hills property standards committee and is a member of Eastern Ontario Development Program committee for the Haliburton County Development Corporation.

Highlands Opera proud of 10 years

By Darren Lum

Where has the time gone for the Highlands Opera Theatre?

It's amazing how 10 years can fly by, said the theatre's co-founder and general director Valerie Kuinka, who helped to start it with husband and renowned Canadian opera tenor, Richard Margison.

"You work away and you're putting one foot in front of the other and then working very hard at making what you're doing a success, hopefully, and you look up. Oh, my gosh. It's been 10 years. I can't believe it," she said.

The Highlands Opera Studio, which is run in the summer by the theatre company, is a proving ground of sorts for its participants. The young professional opera singers are invited for a unique opportunity to get away from the city and spend time in the beautiful Highlands, while concentrating on honing and refining their craft under the tutelage of respected professionals to further their careers.

This idea was a dream for Kuinka and Margison.

Close to 15 years ago, the couple noticed there was a gap for young people aspiring to be professionals in opera, particularly for singers.

Although universities teach young people, they weren't doing everything necessary to help aspiring opera singers join the professional ranks. The studio stands alone, Kuinka says.

"There really is no other program in Canada that provides the interaction with these top level opera professionals. There are other training programs, but they're at the university level. We're past that. We're above that. We're like the young artists programs that are associated with major opera companies," she said.

The studio doesn't just help professional singers become better singers, it also connects them with important contacts in the opera industry.

Kuinka is a violist, who played with the Canadian Opera Company for 20 years and is now part of the National Ballet of Canada orchestra, and has been an opera stage director from 1995. Margison was named as an officer of the Order of Canada in 2001.

"We have the ear of many of the most powerful people within the opera industry and we maintain that through our own initiative all the way through the years. We know there is a relevance," Kuinka says.

Besides them, the studio has included notables such as John Fisher, the director of music administration at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City from 1997 to 2006. He returned to the Met post in September of 2015 after four years with the Welsh National Opera.

"He's come for more than one season to interact with these young people, listen to them sing, help coach them and to therefore provide a new contact for them" she says.

The program started with just seven participants and was only three weeks long.

The participants, who are often aged between 19 and 35, are professional singers. Participants are selected after an interview and audition. The core operations of what the organization does is covered by fundraising.

Close to 200 singers have participated

This year's program starts on Aug. 1 and ends with its performance on Sept. 1. It includes 23 participants from across the country.

None of the singers are charged for their participation in the studio. The average cost is $8,000 to $8,500 per participant, Kuinka says.

The beginnings of the theatre group came from a need to have a residence away from the city.

While looking for a second home in cottage country, the couple spent time with friends in three areas, seeing what worked for them. She says it was like Goldilocks and the Three Bears.

"Huntsville is too hard. Kawartha was too soft. Haliburton [County] was just right," she says.

They bought their Mountain Lake house in 2002 and two years after, a chance meeting between Kuinka and Curtis Eastmure led to a conversation about bringing opera to the Highlands.

This meeting led to an introduction to the Highlands Summer Festival's Jack Brezina and Melissa Stephens. Both remain active with the not-for-profit, charitable community theatre company. Brezina is its president and Stephens is its executive producer. The festival became an important partner to the Highlands Opera Studio. The studio handled the artistic side of running the opera school and holding performances while the Festival handled the infrastructure side, which included marketing, ticket sales and introductions to the community. After two years, the Highlands Opera Theatre was launched to continue producing the studio.

The two organizations work together in marketing. For the past six years, the theatre has been a charitable organization.

For Kuinka, the ultimate dream is to have the theatre evolve into a fully professional company in the Highlands with an opera studio, capable of being able to have live accompanying music.

She appreciates the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion for hosting them the past 10 years. She acknowledges the support and how the venue has made opera approachable to an audience that would not usually consider it. She says this puts the studio at the "forefront of audience development."

There are economic and cultural opportunities being realized because of the theatre's presence.

When the participants leave here after their studio experience they become unofficial ambassadors for the area, spreading the word about the hidden gem. She estimates close to 200 participants have attended.

Kuinka says the studio allows audiences to have a better understanding of opera.

"They've never really understood what the story was within that opera until they saw it at Highlands Opera Studio because the experience was intimate. They felt able to focus on the drama," she said.

She wishes the theatre's budget were bigger to market beyond Canada.

Patrons of opera are willing to go anywhere to see and hear the next generation of stars.

Bancroft's Adam Bishop (Gabriel von Eisentein) chose opera over becoming a doctor. Local audiences of Johann Strauss's Die Fledermaus were glad he did in this Highlands Opera Studio performance of the comedic operetta in 2009. The opera studio is celebrating 10 years. /File photo by Matt James

Once they come, it's not difficult to get them to return to the Highlands for future opera performances that rival what is staged in larger centres, including everything else they discover here while visiting.

"They will be impressed as if they would be sitting in New York, or Toronto, or anywhere ... it's about the quality of our young people," she said. "They come to that and look around and go, 'wow. This place is amazing. What else is here? Look at the Sculpture Forest. They have a Haliburton School of the Arts.' This is what we're finding that is happening."

She adds there is a hope to expand from the summer programming into the rest of the year.

"There are still lots of hills to climb in the next 10 years, but we do feel that it's on the upswing. We do feel from the community the support and appreciation for what we're bringing and we do want to build on that and build on the engagement with the community within our activities," she said.

The public is given a unique opportunity to not just be exposed to top-flight operas, but to, maybe, be part of it, which can lead to increased ownership, she said.

She wants a "collaborative operatic presentation in the summer" and an expansion of the theatre's brand.

"If they love to sing in some sort of opera chorus, or some aspect of a production to feel it and be on stage. This is something I dream about doing," she said.

Swimming lessons offered on lakes

By Darren Lum

Pine Lake stretches across the horizon behind Haliburton's newest certified swimming instructor, Paiten Smolen.

Smolen will not only be teaching at Pine Lake, but also at Eagle Lake this summer to a wide range of ages, from babies (with parents) to adults.

These are the beautiful backdrops for the summer learning opportunity offered by Dysart et al.

The Grade 12 Bracebridge and Muskoka Lakes Secondary School student is looking forward to being able to work outdoors this summer unlike other years when she was stuck inside working.

"I really like this because I'm going to be in the water every day and with kids and that is something I really like to do," she said.

Smolen, the eldest of four, enjoys teaching and is entering her second year as a tap instructor at the Heritage Ballet Studio.

She lives in Haliburton with her family and attended Stuart Baker Elementary School, J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School and, until recently, Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. She has been a part-time swim instructor since Grade 10 at the pool in Bracebridge.

Although Smolen didn't receive her formal training on a lake, she sees the benefit of learning how to swim on a lake when compared to in a pool.

"Once you learn how to swim on open water, I think swimming in a pool is not as scary. So I think it's good to introduce kids to big water swimming."

Smolen grew up on Grass Lake and said with the lessons comes additional education.

"Not only do we teach them skills, we teach them water safety as well. If they were to fall out of a boat and they had no lifejacket on, what would they do? We teach them how to do floats in case they go too deep and they can get on their backs and keep their faces out of the water and it is really just to make sure if they are put in the situation that they can help themselves out," she said.

There are four sessions available from July 4 until Aug. 26. Each session is from Monday to Thursday. The last Friday of each session is reserved as a make-up day in the event of cancellations due to inclement weather. There are nine classes available per session.

Cost per person is $80 per session. Space is limited. Check with the township or see its website (www.dysartet.ca/uncategorized/swimming-lessons/) for details and how to register.

Haliburton's Paiten Smolen, a certified swim instructor, is inviting the public to learn to swim with her this summer. Lessons are being offered at Pine Lake (pictured) and Eagle Lake through Dysart et al. See www.dysartet.ca/uncategorized/swimming-lessons/ for more information.

It was handmade by the Haliburton Highlands Quilt Guild and machine quilted by Barb Leffering, bound by Marg Despard and labelled by Anne Murray.

And Now

(Right, below) The Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary is still raffling quilts. This one was made once again by the members of the Haliburton Quilt Guild for the 2016 quilt raffle. The auxiliary pays a nominal amount and the members of the guild donate their time to create it. Pictured are Judith Cole, Trish Boersma, Nancy Johnston, Karen Shirley and Pat Stiver. Tickets are available at the farmers' market and the gift shop in the Haliburton Hospital. The auxiliary's Tag Day is on July 15 and International Night is on Oct. 22. Photo submitted by Tracey Lear

Be watchful for blacklegged ticks

It's time for a tick talk to help residents protect themselves against Lyme disease, a growing reality in this region, local health officials say.

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit encourages people to be watchful for blacklegged ticks – or deer ticks – that can spread Lyme disease. Last year, 17 blacklegged ticks collected as part of the health unit's surveillance program for Lyme disease were found to be positive for the bacteria that causes the illness. That was largest number of ticks found to be carrying the bacteria that causes Lyme disease in the health unit's area over the past five years. In 2015, the health unit also reported three confirmed and five probable human cases of Lyme disease in its area, which includes Northumberland County, Haliburton County and the City of Kawartha Lakes.

"Recent findings show Lyme disease is on the rise in this area, so it's important to know the symptoms of Lyme, avoid ticks that can spread illness, and know what to do if bitten," says Richard Ovcharovich, manager of environmental health with the HKPR District Health Unit.

While Lyme disease is a serious illness that can cause symptoms such as fever, headache, tiredness, muscle and joint pains and skin rashes, it can be successfully treated with antibiotics. That is why the health unit urges people who suspect they have symptoms of Lyme disease to seek medical attention. The health unit is also encouraging health-care providers in the area to consider Lyme disease in their investigation and diagnosis of patients who come to them for help.

To help local residents reduce their risk of Lyme disease, the health unit is advising them to watch out for blacklegged ticks that can spread illness. Since ticks are tiny and cannot fly, they act like "hitchhikers" settling on tall grasses and bushes until they can attach themselves to a passing person or animal. Once attached, ticks will feed on a host's blood. "Ticks are more likely to spread infection to a person if they've fed for more than 24 hours," Ovcharovich explains. "If you've been outdoors, check your entire body for ticks and promptly remove any that you find."

The health unit offers these additional tips for people to avoid bites from blacklegged ticks:

- Wear light-coloured clothing, which makes ticks easier to spot and remove before they feed.
- Wear closed footwear and socks and, when possible, wear long pants and a long-sleeved shirt. Tuck your pants into your socks, especially if you are walking in long grass.
- Use a tick repellent that contains DEET (follow the manufacturer's directions for use).
- Protect pets. Dogs, cats and other pets can carry ticks that spread Lyme disease. Pet owners should put tick and flea collars on pets and from time-to-time check dogs and cats for the presence of ticks. Contact your veterinarian if you have any concerns about your pet being exposed to ticks.

- If you spend time outdoors during the day, get into the habit to check your body for ticks. Pay special attention to the groin, scalp and armpits. A mirror can be useful to check the back of your body, or ask someone else to check it.
- Promptly and properly remove a tick from your body to prevent infection. Using a finely-tipped tweezers, grasp the tick as close to your skin as possible. Pull it straight out, gently but firmly. Thoroughly clean the bite site with rubbing alcohol and/or soap and water. If possible, place the live tick into a screw-top bottle and take it to your health care provider or health unit. Testing can be done for surveillance purposes to determine if the ticks in this area are the type that can carry Lyme disease.

People can get more information on Lyme disease by calling the health unit at 1-866-888-4577 or visiting www.hkpr.on.ca.

New rules protects employees' tips in Ontario

Whenever most of us eat at a restaurant or get our hair cut, we often give a tip as a way to show appreciation.

There's an expectation that the tips will go to the employees. Most of the time, they do – but that's not always the case.

Starting June 10, 2016, it will be illegal for employers to keep a share of employees' tips or other gratuities, except as permitted by the Employment Standards Act.

Under the new rules, employers also can't make deductions from tips for things like spillage, breakage, losses or damage, etc. The new rules affect workplaces where tips and gratuities are often received, such as salons, catering firms, taxi services and food delivery.

"This legislation provides clarity on the subject of sharing tips for the hard-working people in the hospitality and service industries," said Labour Minister Kevin Flynn. "These new rules will help protect vulnerable employees while creating a level playing field for the vast majority of businesses that treat their employees fairly."

The employer will still be allowed to collect and redistribute the tips or other gratuities among its employees, a practice often referred to as "tip pooling."

Tip pooling is a long-standing industry practice that aims to reduce income inequality among employees. Some employees, such as cooks and bussers, do not have direct access to tips.

The employer can also withhold tips if required by statute or court order, such as a garnishment order.

"The Ontario Legislature agreed that the practice of misrepresenting tips, service charges or other gratuities is unacceptable in our province," said Antonny Garcia, head of the Ottawa Servers Association. "The passing of this Ontario Ministry of Labour legislation is a great step forward not only for the Ottawa Servers Association, but for all workers in our sector all across Ontario."

Business owners who regularly perform the same work as those who would normally receive tips – such as cleaning and serving food – will still be allowed to take part in the tip pool.

The changes come as a result of Bill 12, the Protecting Employees' Tips Act.

A 2012 survey of 1,668 organizations conducted by the Canadian Tourism Human Resource Council revealed that 53 per cent of locations in the tourism industry reported having staff that received gratuities.

The survey also showed that more than two-thirds of those workplaces that received gratuities reported having tip pooling policies.

For more information about the new rules, visit Ontario.ca/TipsAndGratuities or call 1-800-531-5551.

Revving up for Food for Kids

Larry Parsons' classic Ford was one of several antique cars at the Sears Haliburton third annual Food for Kids Charity Barbecue fundraising event on Saturday, May 28 at the Haliburton retail location. The event, which raised $8,300 for the student nutrition program that provides healthy snacks and breakfast meals to 2,200 children and youth throughout Haliburton County, included hamburgers, hotdogs, live entertainment, antique cars and activities for children, including a raffle with more than $7,000 of prizes. Organizers thank hosts Sears Haliburton, the Haliburton and District Lions Club, who donated $500, the Haliburton Highlands Time Travellers car club, its volunteers, the Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre, Gord Kidd and Friends band, Brad Park and Haliburton Foodland and Troy Austen for their support. /DARREN LUM Staff

Take your reading glasses to the fair

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

What I've learned lately is that growing older isn't a sudden process. It's a gradual progression where things slowly stop working at the capacity they did when you were younger.

My vision is a great example of that. I now need reading glasses for the first time in my life.

Proof of that came recently when reading the itinerary for the 152nd Haliburton County Fair. The first time I read it my reading glasses were on top of my head. Thankfully, I read it again. Otherwise, I still might have thought the following:

1. That there was a word processing and sawmill demonstration, rather than a wood processing and sawmill demo. This wouldn't have necessarily been a bad thing, but it did leave me confused as to why.
2. That there was a Mitt Show rather than Mutt Show. That's good, because mutts are far more entertaining. Mitts are, quite frankly, boring.
3. I also discovered it's a beer tent rather than a bear tent. Again, the latter would have been interesting, but the liability issues would have been too much.
4. I also discovered they're having sheep shearing not sheep sharing demonstrations. That's good because you would have spent the whole day herding them.
5. I clarified that there was a 50/50 and Raffle instead of rifle draw. Which is good because even as I read it, I thought, "This could get out of hand."
6. I was also pleased to learn that there wasn't a drunk tank but there was a dunk tank. Either way it would have been interesting to watch.
7. And that there was a coat rather than a goat show. Good thing I read it again. Otherwise I might have worn my good parka.
8. And, thankfully, it's Pony Pull, not pill. Otherwise I wouldn't have wanted to watch the demonstration.
